

The drawing consists of three main parts: a schematic diagram, a rack layout, and a floor plan.

Schematic Diagram: Shows a three-phase power distribution system. The top horizontal line represents the main supply, with four phase conductors (F5, F6, F7, F8) and a neutral conductor (F9). Each phase conductor is protected by a 20A circuit breaker (C20). The bottom horizontal line represents the distribution to the building's electrical system. Four vertical lines represent the phase conductors, each protected by a 25A circuit breaker (FI 5, FI 6, FI 7, FI 8). The neutral conductor is protected by a 25A circuit breaker (FI 9). The circuit breakers are labeled with their rated current (In) and the rated residual operating current (IΔn): In=25, IΔn=30mA, 25/0,03A. The bottom horizontal line is labeled "ODBIÓR 3F" (3-phase distribution) and "ZASIL ROZDZ T-75" (T-75 distribution).

Rack Layout: A detailed view of the electrical rack, showing the internal components and their arrangement. The rack is 575mm wide and 1500mm high. It contains several rows of circuit breakers, fuses, and terminal blocks. The components are labeled with their respective ratings and types.

Floor Plan: A schematic diagram of the building's floor plan, showing the layout of the rooms and corridors. The building is labeled "SKRZYDŁO NR 4" (Wing No. 4) and "SKRZYDŁO NR 1" (Wing No. 1). The floor plan is oriented with the main entrance at the top.
